A Husband Cuts His Wife's Throat. On Wednesday evening, at 8 o'clock, Dr FRANK ROYAL, of Chicago, while walking with his wife on Quincy street, anddenly, while in a fit of rage, out her throat, indicting a ghastly wound and immediately made his escape. It appears that the parties, who lived in a small cuttage on Adams street, had left home about the hour named for a walk nothing unusual was noticed in the demeanor They had proceeded but two blocks and when on Quincy street, near Wells, hose in that vicinity were startled by a cry of "Murder" proceeding from the woman, the man at the same time leaving her and making off northward across the vacant lot, Mrs. ROYAL, holding her hands to her throat, the blood streaming from between her fingers, ran home to their residence on Adams street, exclaiming to several persons she met on the way, "My husband has cut my throat." She entered the house without assistance, about which a large crowd gathered, and the most extraordinary rumors were allost, and much excitement prevailed.

He found that a long deep gash had been cut in the side of the woman's throat, presenting a ghastly appearance, though severng none of the more important blood vessels About an hour and a half after the committal of the deed of sitempted wife-murder Dr. Royal was taken into custody by officer West, at No. 111 Jackson street, the residence of his daughter, a Mrs. Armstrong, wife of

The Milanese are beside themselves with rage and disappointment. An armistice!—
The word is fall of shame and bitterness to The word is fall of shame and bitterness to a Lombard! Eleven years ago the armistics of Salaseo gave Milan back to Austria—what will this do? Every one is is too mach exoited to reason or think; the suddenness! just as the Mincio is crossed! just as the fortresses are renobed! Puscliera invested!—Austria disorganized and broken—why? To benefit whom? Not the honor of France; not the Independence of Italy—none bat Austrians can profit by -it, these excited youths exclaim. I pity them from my soul. You will reason calmly, see the good to be gained, the evils to be avoided—they remember the hideous past, and in the shock of the great chief was feared and looked up to by

Lecture on the Life and Public Services of Henry Clay.

The second lecture on this subject was given last evening, by Mr. Manshall, at Albany Hall. He commenced with the difficulties of 1824 and stated that this was the speaking of ADAMS and CLAY, he took occasion to picture the latest method of nominating Presidents as connected with the good he attached to it. In fact, the whole tenor of old-fashioned canouses. He said it was sinjury. The Ford du Life Press says the ment, to find such a spasm of disgust in nothing could be more destructive to the lady's prospects. However good Comms intentions Boy Drowsed Ar Oshkosit.—A son of 1859, men not only take no pains to express publishing his article, and rather had taste.

He spoke feelingly and eloquently of Jack-He knew him well, and knew him to be one of the ablest men this country ever produced, should admire Old Hickory. He then touch ed upon the war of 1812, saving, except our infant Navy, which was always victorious there was no glory in the war. But Old Hickory, "the horse stealer," as they called him, met the veterans of Waterloo at New Orleans -they were the men who had given the best officers to England; they come, but they could not say with Crasen, "Vent vidi vici, I came I saw, I conquered." The true career of Mr. Char's glory commenced in 1828; he had to oppose the most powerful Administration, but he opposed it with honor to himself. Though he was beaten every time he run for President, his enemies were afraid of him. In 1832 he was sent back to the 3enate, and he changed the whole character of it, stamping it with the impress of his own great genius. In his last great struggle, when Gen. Taylon run against bim, he was abandoned by his own State. I can't tell how he felt, but it must have been like the eagle which views the feathered dart that struck it, plucked from his own body. But the Eagle did not fall. He never fell !

I write in haste, as I was just scaling my letter when the news was brought to my room by half a dozen youths, quive incoherent as to time, terms, or, in short, any other details. Still there can be no doubt of the truth, and now I can add one piece of certain news. As early as the 2d of July the Franch Emperor had made overtures to Francis Joseph. All believe here that it is Austria who sued for the armistice. I can asssure you this is not true. successfully. You want to bring clavery up to it, and no power on earth shall ever force me to legislate slavery any place where it is not."

He vindicated CLAY from all charges of desiring the repeal of the Missouri Compromise; spoke in high terms of the "omnibus" bill, and in closing became really eloquent as he drew near the death-bed of the great Statesman. We have room for only one passage:
"He did fall in '28 from a lofty height, but

I have studied his character; I have seen him when the passion of his soul was lashed into full play; and I have admissible, must contain thought, but the seen him amid the overwhelming weight of many sorrows. But never did I see a man who owed so little for his commanding power over men, to art or cultivation. A FEARFUL LEAP A PRISONEN FROM A RUNNING TRAIN—Officer Bloom, who started for Rome, N. Y., last week with Chos. H. Wilson, charged with forgery in that place, has returned, and gives an interesting account of his journey eastward.

On Wednesday night, and when the train was within fifty niles of the place of destination, Wilson complained of being sick, and the officer repaired with him to an adjoining car, and slipped the handcuff from his own wrist, but let it remain attached to the prisoner rests, and in stepping from one car to the other, the prisoner jumped from the platform. The sp. ed of the train could not have been less than forty miles an hour. As soon as officer Bloom could recover from his surprise, he sought the conductor and had the train stopped.

The position our official now found him self in was by no means a pleasant one. He searched alone for Wilson for some time, but without success. He then went to the near est station, and searced assistance and again remewed his search, but with no better success.

In perusing his article, I was surprised at the excessive laudation which characterized it. That there is some truth in what he says, there is no doubt, but that his enthusiasm has exceeded his reason, it appears to me is quite as evident. If Course intended to notice Miss Tync's writings critically, it follows that either she is scarcely excelled in the whole country as a poetess, on that he is an incompetent critic. The first part of the proposition I must deny, but, since "by denying the first part of an antitlesis, the last part is asserted," that I may not raise the proposition I must deny, but, since "by denying the first part of an antitlesis, the last part is asserted," that I may not not intended for a criticism. But here is trouble again-why did the gentleman write his article, if not for that purpose? On what other grounds can he take such liberties with the lady's name? I might answer this question to my own satisfaction, but will forear making suppositions.

I really believe he has imposed a lasting injury upon the fair authoress in what he has said. The expectations which will be raised by his article will scarcely be satisfied by the productions of our ablest female poets; and it is inevitably true that, if the public is once disappointed in Miss Tyng, it will be long before she can receive that credit which is justly her due. I do not wish to say that Miss Tync herself would sustain any great injury, yet, though she may possess the strongest judgment and common sense, it would not be strange if she should get the idea that what she has already written is sufficient to render her name "famous," and that as far as that is concerned there is no further need of her exercising great care and turning point of Mr. CLAY's fortune. but that it is deserving one half the praise so inconsiderately and so indiscriminately lavished upon it by Comins, I do not believe .--The music of her poems is nearly perfect, but the "perfect finish," spoken of, I have never found. On the other hand, I have always thought they were rather carelessly written, and that they showed a want of attention to those little things which create unison in idea as well as harmony of expression. They contain many metaphors, and these are almost invariably marred by changing the figure before it is completed; for example I will quote two of the four stanzas of a little poem cited by Contas for its perfect music and finish:"

"Cold, hopeless, and nigh unto sinking, My soul sends its cry through the night, And the dark wave of doubt are rolled backward, By that shrift, piercing heart-cry for light.

FOR THE DAILY SENTINEL. Dr. Hellows Proposes to Establish a New Catholic Church.

New York, July 29-3 F. M. Considerable excitement has been created in various circles by an announcement in the Evening Post, that Rev. Dr. Bellows had proposed, in an address before the United Clergymen of the Unitarian Church, the es-tablishment of a new Catholic Church, differ-ing from the Church of Rome by the omission of what may be deemed obsolete and erroneous or needless dectrines, but preserving the attractive features of the rituals, the imaginative symbols, and the sacred festivals which help to give the Roman Catholic church its namely and universal deservation.

which help to give the Roman Catholic church its papular and universal character—the new sect to be designated the Broad Church.

Rev. Mr. Frothingham, a minister of the same charch and who with Rev. Dr. Osgood was said to be connected with Dr. Bellow's plan, denies all knowledge of this magnificent scheme, and treats the matter as a joke. The Evening Post, however, in publishing Mr. Frothingham's card, says Mr. Frothingham's card, says Mr. Frothingham's card says Mr. Frothingham is mistaken in supposing that Dr. Bellow's plan of a new Catholic Church is a joke. The discourse which announced it, is pervaded by a tone of carnest feeling which is characteristic of the eloquent preacher, and it is highly improbable that he would be guilty of indulging his pleasantry in a form so impressive and solemn as a public address before the United Clergymen of his denomination. THE PATH THROUGH THE CORN. Wavy and bright in the summer air-Like a quiet sea when the wind blows fair, Like a quiet sea when the wind blows fair, and its roughest breath has scarcely ourled— The green highway to an unknown world— 30rt whispers passing from shore to shore Like a heart content—yet desires more; Who feels forlors, Wandering thus on the path through the corn?

A short space since, and the dead leaves by Corruption under the hedgerows gray; Nor hum of Insect, nor roles of bird O'er the desolate field was ever heard; Oaly at eve the pallid snow Blushed rose-red, in the red sun-glow; Till one bleat morn, Shot up into 11fo the young green corn, Small and feeble, tender and pale, It bent its head to the winter gale, Hearkened the wren's soft note of cheer, rkened the wren's sort note or case;, reely believing spring was near; chesinuts bud out, and the champions blow, a daisies mimic the vanished snow, Where it was born, On either side of the path through the corn. The corn—the corn—the beautiful corn, Resing wonderfully, morn by morn, Forst, scarce as high as a fairy's wand, Then, just in reach of a child's wee hand, the growing, growing, tall, green and stron With the voice of the harvest in its song, While in fond scorn

The lark out-carols the murnouring corn.

Oh strange, swest path, formed day by day, llow, when and wherefore—nongue cannot say, No more than of life's strange paths we know, Whither they lead us, or why we go, Or whether our eyes shall ever see. The wheat in the ear, or the fruit on the tree. Yet-who is forlorn? Heaven, that watered the furrows, will ripen the corn.

A Singular Panie.

Mr. Raymond, of the New York Times, in writing from the vicinity of the battle field of Solferino relates the following singular incident: incident:

"The day after the battle, crowds of people were seen coming down the street with uncommon activity. Their numbers and their speed increased. Zonaves and other soldiers were running as fast as the rest. I stepped into the street and asked three or four soldiers in succession what was the mater. Each cave the same runley. eyes and clasped his hands in pity as he passed us, and soon turned off from the road and ed us, and soon turned off from the road and buried his stalwart form in a field of wheat. This quite reconciled us to the desperate state of things, and laughing at his sorrows we entirely forgot our own. Reasoning the case, moreover, as we walked along, we thought it just possible that a corps of Aus-trian horse might have dashed in from Pes-hicas to agree the prisoners of when there oniers to reacte the prisoners, of whom there were 6000 in Castiglione; but anything beyond this seemed quite impossible. The whole body of fugitives upon our road was out of sight, but a long cloud of dust on the road to Monteohiaro showed that in that dispation the puris was unabled. As we had road to Montechiaro showed that in that direction the panic was unabated. As we had agreed to meet "Malakoff" on his return from Bresona at Montechiarc, we struck into the cross roads leading through the farms and country districts, and after a couple of hours' brisk walking, reached the place.—We found it in the very height of the fever, and it was with a good deal of difficulty that we prevailed upon the landlord of the inn to open the doors and give us possession of the rooms we had previously engaged.

This was certainly the most remarkable instance of a pure panic lever saw—and the

This was certainly the most remarkable instance of a pure panic I ever saw—and the most striking feature of it was the rapidity with which it increased in force and volume as it rolled along. We heard afterwards that it produced the most serious results when it overtook the trains of wounded on the road to Bresola. They were tumbled headlong from the carts into the roadside, and many of them were run over by the artillery wagons, as they were utterly concealed from sight by the dense clouds of dust which hung over the road. Of its results at Brescia our regular correspondent, who was on the spot, will give a detailed account. I have since tried very hard to find out how it originated, but with only indifferent success.

At first we were told that a squadron of Piedmontese cavalry, who were promensding the country, in the direction of Castiglione, had been mistaken for Austrians. But an officer in the eamp of Gen. Carrobert, which officer in the samp of Gen. Carrobert, which we visited next day—upon the farthest ex-treme of the field of buttle—told us that it came from five Austrian soldiers, who had concealed themselves in the bushes after the fight, and now came in to surrender. fight, and now came in to surrender. They were said to have stated that the Austrian army were rapidly coming up in full force, and would soon be in possession of Castiglione. I do not suppose the French papers will say anything about this affair, and I have therefore been more particular in mentioning it. Soldiers, certainly, are only men, and when not under the immediate control of their officers, are doubtless subject to all the ordinary weaknesses of humanity.

the ordinary weaknesses of humanity. The Mew York Press on the Peace.

The morning journals are all discussing the peace in Europe. The Times, which has been intensely Bonaparte since the commencement of the war, says: "The settlement of Italy agreed upon between Napoleon III., Victor Emanuel and Francis Joseph, as it comes reported to us to-day, is too evidently garbled and confused to admit of analysis or discussion. The telegram of Emperor to Empress, announcing the conclusion of the war, throws no light on the arrangement provided for the future. The comments of one English journal, always loyal to the Italian cause and liberal in the tone, and generally just to the French Emperor, the London Daily News, as quoted in our telegrams, would seem to imply that the Italian settlement, as understood in Great Britain, was held to be an abandonment by Napoleon of a people for whom he had drawn the sword, and if it be true that the Kingdom of Venice has been reserved to Austria with the com-The New York Press on the Peace. people for whom he had drawn the sword, and if it be true that the Kingdom of Venice has been reserved to Anustra with the command of the Adige, it will require a very strong and convincing faith in the efficiency of the new Italian Confederation, which that settlement is also said to have created, to satisfy friends of Italian in Gooderation, which that settlement is also said to have created, to satisfy friends of Italian freedom that the Emperor of the French has done for Italy all that he undertook to do, or all that Europe believed, and will still believe, it to have been in his power to effect."

an American Pickpocket in France-Curious

From the St. Joseph (Mo.) Examiner. The following letter was addressed to Dr. Edwards, of this city, Penitentiary Physicion. The writer was, not long since, an inmate of the Missouri Penitentiary, occupying most of the period of his incarceration, the post of hospital steward. He proved a superior nurse—the best indeed that Dr. Edwards over say in the t pecition. Combined sits in rior nurse—the best indeed that Dr. Edwards ever saw in that position. Coming daily in contact with the Doctor, he formed a deep attachment for him, which he proves by keeping the Doctor advised of his proceedings and whereabouts—this being the third letter the Doctor has received from him since his discherge from the Panitaritary. charge from the Penitentiary.

We give the letter complete, suppressing only the names of the writer and some others:

Tuesday, June 13, 1859.

Dr. J. H. Edwards—Sir:—I am in France once more. I wrote to you from Haves some time ago, and from Constantinople. I have just returned from Constantinople. I may may to Liverpool. England, and from thers to the States, America. I hope soon to see you—in about five months. I am in the great naval port of France. They talk of nothing here but the war that is going on in Austria. I have got plenty of money, and can make plenty here. I am making up for those three years I spent in Jefferson City. Lots of fun and plenty to drink, and thousands of pretty women. Who would not be a cross man and live like a prince? Tell—that I am here and would like to see him here. There are are plenty of convicts here, with chains on, but they have not got me yet, nor never will. I am too sharp for them. I think that you can tell Mr. Hughes that I cannot spare the time to come and board with him yet awhile. I travel under the name of Dr.—, and ease everybody—that is their pockets, of loose change. Some may think that I am not in France, but I am. I shall leave here on the 1st of July for Paris, then to Calais, then to Dover, and then to London, and from thereto Liverpool for New York. Them three years in Jefferson City made a man of une, and a desperate one, too. I shall come to the United States and buy a farm, and settle down on what money I have got—a few thousand dollars. I hope Dr. Snodgrass is well. My best respects to him. Tell—that Mr.—of the—, can't put my name in the papers now.

New York Money Matters. &c.

New York Money Matters. &c.

New York Money Matter To-dat.—We have the following report of the doings in the New York Money and Stock Markets to-day, by telegraph:

Saturday's abipment of specie will reach $1,500,000, which, with the sum sent by the *Great Britain*, carries the week's shipments up to $1,500,000. The foreign news gives rise to much discussion and unasual diversity of opinion, consequently much indecision marked the dealings in stocks to-day. The tendency of prices was downward, nearly all classes of securities participating in the heaviness. The decline is heaviest in the west & R. stocks, which continue to be unfavorely affected by the discouraging traffic.

The money market is easy at full rates. The demand to moderate extent, is only on the banks and banking buses, and seldon locked duller than at present. The rates on call are 5%, and operationally on prime paper. The cach receipts from customs are not 30 large this week, but will be heavy again nextweek. The subfracancy stands at $54,60,000. The negotiation of 5% $2 cent treasury notes at par go steadity, and parties take them about as fast as the debt requires the monety.

Broatistuffs, &c.
The following table shows the movements of breadsteffs at this point for the past 24 hours:

Receipts.

Receipts.

Flour, Wheat, Osts, Corn, Barley, Rye bils, bil

er for wheat, though dealers do not show much inclina-tion to purchase at the advanced figures. Receipts con-tinue so extremely light that there would be no probability in making out a cargo in any reasonable period and hence shippers are generally walting for larger receipts before purchasing. A thousand bushels of No.1 spring sold at 58c f. o. b., and the same quantity of extra (0.1 at 69c in store. These comprise the principal trans-ctions of the day. Flour remains in statu quo. $3,-75 to $4 would be the outside quotations for good to choice country spring extra, and $4 to $4,25 for city brands. Not much done in oats or other grain, and THE WOOL TRADE.—The Detroit Tribune of yester day, says:

The news of the peace seems to have occasioned an improved feeling. There is an improved inquiry, and prices tend upward, at least in this quarter. We hear of orders in the hands of dealers from parties who into middle of the season withdrew from the mattet, intindicted by the "high prices." They now offer 45c for choice ellips, but it is next to impossible that orders can be filled at least at that figure.
